PLAN NOW FOR SUMMER GRAZING

Many Virginia farmers run short of grazing for their livestock in July and August. Now is the time says J. F. Shoulders, associate agronomist, Agricultural Extension Service, Virginia Polytechnic Institute, Blacksburg, to plan for that not to happen. Here is what he recommends:

—Sudangrass and Pearlmillet: are two good summer forage crops. They are fast-growing, hot weather crops and will be ready to graze or green chop in six to eight weeks after planting. Usually 1/3 to 1/2 acre per cow will furnish enough extra grazing during mid-summer.

Seeding either Sudangrass or Pearlmillet separtely is better than planting the two crops together in the same field. Planting of either crop may be done from May 15 to July 1; and seeding half of the area early and the remainder two to three weeks later will stagger the grazing time.

For best results, seed on a soil with good water-holding capacity, use a rercommended variety, and fertilize well. A deep fertile soil on which corn dose well is good for either Sudangrass or Pearlmillet. Use 500 to 800 pounds per acre of a 10-10-10 or the equivalent.

Gahi-1 and Commerical Pearlmiller are the varieties recommended for Virginia. Piper and Greenleaf are the recommended Sudan grasses.

Use 20 to 30 pounds of seed per acre. If desired, I bushel of soybeans may be seeded with 15 to 20 pounds of Sudangrass or Pearlmillet. Prepare a seedbed as you would for corn. Drilling the seed is preferred, but it may be broadcas, and harrowed in.

HOG PRICES DUE TO RISE IN MAY

Prices for market hogs are due to rise seasonally in May, and could reach a peak of $20 in June or July, reports L. L. Denison, livestock marketing specialist at Virginia Polytechnic Institute.

However, Denison says a report from the State Crop Reporting Board indicates that broiler supplies in June will be up 20 per cent from a year ago. Such a large supply of broilers will result in a downward pressure on hog prices this summer.

Hog prices this fall will likely be $2 to $4 lower than prices during the same period in 1960. The March pig crop report stated that farmers intentions in 10 Corn Belt states are to farrow 8 per cent more sows this spring than a year ago. An increase almost as large can be expected in the United States pig crop, since these 10 states account for about 75 per cent of the total. So Denison says prices will probably drop from a peak in June or July to a low of $15.50 to $16.00 in November and December.

Farmers also indicated intentions to farrow 5 per cent more sows in the June-August period than they farrowed a year earlier. This would result in a larger supply of pork in the first part of 1962 than in the same period of 1961. If intentions are carried out, prices in January-March, 1962, will likely be $1 to $1.50 lower than this year.
